

Ted Bouskill
Security Evangelist
Security & Risk Management
Electronic Arts, CANADA

Ted Bouskill has been using computers for over 35 years. He first began programming as a pre-teen on mainframes managed by his father who worked for IBM. Even at that age the importance of protecting and securing information was a fundamental he was taught along with best practices to secure systems.

Ted has worked full-time in the software development industry for over 25 years and many projects, including financial systems, that have had security as a key requirement both as intranet and internet applications. He has worked at a Computershare, an industry leading securities transfer agent where security and protection of confidential customer information was of the highest importance.

Recently Ted has begun applying his passion for security and the quality of software development security practices as a Security Evangelist in the gaming industry for Electronic Arts.
